Frequently Asked Questions –excerpts as answered by the WDAA (©)

Why Western Dressage?
The Western Dressage Association® of America (WDAA) was organized to provide western riders and horses with an educational program which incorporates the principles of lightness into a whole new way of thinking about riding western. Western Dressage helps a rider to improve the horse's balance, cadence and carriage.

Do I need special tack, equipment, or clothing to show in Western Dressage?
No! The current USEF rule book permits riders to perform the tests in either a standard western snaffle bit, which is defined in the rule book, or in a standard western bit which is also defined there. You may use your western saddle and your western headstall and reins.

What is the difference between Western Dressage and traditional Dressage?
The goals of Western Dressage and Dressage are similar. They both wish to create a better horse and rider with the use of structure and levels. The Western Dressage horse is encouraged to work and school on lighter contact than the typical dressage horses. While both want to see balance, cadence and carriage, the Western Dressage horse will be evaluated with the conformation and movement of today's western horses in mind.

Is Western Dressage for any breed of horse?
Absolutely! Any breed of horse can participate in Western Dressage. In order to participate in the Western Dressage tests, horses should be able to walk, jog and lope, or in the case of gaited horses, walk, gait or jog and lope.
